

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

280
d. 689

Rf. Dobell, Tunbridge Wells. Cat. 128/216

600050586U

280 d. 689

EPIPSYCHIDION.

Edited, with notes, by H. Buxton Forman, and printed for private distribution.

MDCCLXXVI.

EPIPSYCHIDION

Price, 2s.

[Mrs. Shelley classes Epipsychidion among the poems written in 1821 : in a letter to Leigh Hunt dated the 29th of December, 1820, and of which a portion is published in Hunt's Correspondence (Vol I, p. 160), she seems to refer to it as being already written ; but only seems, for the context of the letter, which is extant, shews that there is no reference to Shelley or Epipsychidion in the passage wherein those names were inserted by Thornton Hunt. Whatever be the date of completion, the poem was sent to Mr. Ollier, to be published, in a letter dated the 16th of February, 1821, printed in the Shelley Memorials (pp. 152-3), in which Shelley says, "The longer poem, I desire, should not be considered as my own ; indeed, in a certain sense, it is the production of a portion of me already dead ; and in this sense the advertisement is no fiction. It is to be published simply for the esoteric few ; and I make its author a secret, to avoid the malignity of those who turn sweet food into poison ; transforming all they touch into the corruption of their own natures. My wish with respect to it is that it should be printed immediately in the simplest form, and merely one hundred copies : those who are capable of judging and feeling rightly with respect to a composition of so abstruse a nature, certainly do not arrive at that number—among those, at least, who would ever be excited to read an obscure and anonymous production ; and it would give me no pleasure that the vulgar should read it. If you have any bookselling reason against publishing so small a number as a hundred, merely distribute copies among those to whom you think the poetry would afford any pleasure." It was printed as an octavo pamphlet, sewed, without wrapper, consisting of fly-title Epipsychidion—Price, 2s., title-page (as opposite), 1 page of preface called "Advertisement" with stanza from Dante at back, and text pp. 7 to 31. There is an imprint at the back of the fly-title, as follows :—"London. Printed by S. & R. Bentley Dorset-Street, Salisbury-Square." The name of the lady, omitted from the title-page, was Viviani,—the convent that of St. Anne, Pisa. I have not been able to ascertain that there is in existence any finished MS. of Epipsychidion. —H. B. F.]

EPIPSYCHIDION

VERSES ADDRESSED TO THE NOBLE

AND UNFORTUNATE LADY

EMILIA V.——

NOW IMPRISONED IN THE CONVENT OF ——

L'anima amante si slancia fuori del creato, e si crea nel infinito un Mondo tutto per essa, diverso assai da questo
oscuro e pauroso baratro.

HER OWN WORDS.

LONDON

C AND J OLLIER VERE STREET BOND STREET

MDCCCXXI.

My Song, I fear that thou wilt find but few
Who fitly shall conceive thy reasoning,
Of such hard matter dost thou entertain;
Whence, if by misadventure, chance should bring
Thee to base company, (as chance may do)
Quite unaware of what thou dost contain,
I prithee, comfort thy sweet self again,
My last delight! tell them that they are dull,
And bid them own that thou art beautiful.

ADVERTISEMENT.

[BY SHELLEY.]

THE WRITER of the following Lines died at Florence, as he was preparing for a voyage to one of the wildest of the Sporades, which he had bought, and where he had fitted up the ruins of an old building, and where it was his hope to have realised a scheme of life, suited perhaps to that happier and better world of which he is now an inhabitant, but hardly practicable in this. His life was singular; less on account of the romantic vicissitudes which diversified it, than the ideal tinge which it received from his own character and feelings. The present Poem, like the Vita Nuova of Dante, is sufficiently intelligible to a certain class of readers without a matter-of-fact history of the circumstances to which it relates; and to a certain other class it must ever remain incomprehensible, from a defect of a common organ of perception for the ideas of which it treats. Not but that, gran vergogna sarebbe a colui, che rimasse cosa sotto veste di figura, o di colore rettorico: e domandato non sapesse denudare le sue parole da cotal veste, in guisa che avessero verace intendimento.<sup>1</sup>

The present poem appears to have been intended by the Writer as the dedication to some longer one. The stanza on the opposite<sup>2</sup> page is almost a literal translation from

<sup>1</sup> Mr. Rossetti translates this quotation from Dante thus: "Great were his shame who should rhyme anything under a garb of metaphor or rhetorical colour, and then, being asked, should be incapable of stripping his words of this garb so that they might have a veritable meaning." No doubt Shelley could have expounded the meaning of every line in this most wondrous poem, the main charge against which is that there are some few personal allusions that it is impossible to expound with certainty in his absence.

<sup>2</sup> From the word opposite being employed here in Shelley's edition, it may be fairly assumed that, although the

Dante's famous Canzone

Voi, ch' intendendo, il terzo ciel movete, &c.

The presumptuous application of the concluding lines to his own composition will raise a smile at the expense of my unfortunate friend: be it a smile not of contempt, but pity.<sup>1</sup> stanza was printed on the back of the "advertisement," he meant it to be on the back of the title-page; and I accordingly give it there,—as indeed, Mrs. Shelley, in her first edition of 1839, gave it at the back of a fly-title, and facing the "advertisement." In her second edition of 1839 it preceded the "advertisement," on the same page; and the wording was curiously changed to on the above page. Mr. Rossetti also prints the stanza above the "advertisement," on the same page, but makes a still more curious variation of Shelley's text by reading on the preceding page, instead of on the opposite page.

S.

<sup>1</sup> Writing to Mr. John Gisborne from Pisa on the 22nd of October, 1821, Shelley said (Essays, &c., Vol. II., p. 333-4), "The Epipsychidion is a mystery; as to real flesh and blood, you know I do not deal in those articles; you might as well go to a gin shop for a leg of mutton, as expect anything human or earthly from me. I desired Ollier not to circulate this piece except to the sovereign, and even they, it seems, are inclined to approximate me to the circle of a servant girl and her sweetheart. But I intend to write a symposium of my own to set all this right."

EPIPSYCHIDION.<sup>1</sup>

---

SWEET Spirit! Sister of that orphan one,
Whose empire is the name thou weepest on,<sup>2</sup>
In my heart's temple I suspend to thee
These votive wreaths of withered memory.

Poor captive bird! who, from thy narrow cage,       5
Pourest such music, that it might assuage
The rugged hearts of those who prisoned thee,
Were they not deaf to all sweet melody;
This song shall be thy rose: its petals pale
Are dead, indeed, my adored Nightingale!       10
But soft and fragrant is the faded blossom,
And it has no thorn left to wound thy bosom.

<sup>1</sup> The meaning of this title has been much discussed. Mr. Leicester Warren tells me that a good classical authority, with whose name I am not favoured, considers the meaning to be "a little song about the marriage of two souls." I cannot discern any signification beyond "a little poem about the soul," and am at a loss to see where the marriage element is obtained in the title.

<sup>2</sup> Mr. Rossetti says "this couplet" has often been cited as unintelligible,"—owing, I presume, to that fruitful source of mystification and corruption, the notorious foot-note wherein Professor Craik lays down, among other absurdities, that "it is difficult not to suspect something wrong" in this "strange commencement," as he calls it. Of course, Mr.

Garnett's explanation (Relics of Shelley, p. 97) is right: "The orphan one, Emilia's spiritual sister, is Mary Shelley, whose mother died, in giving her birth; the name is Shelley's own." When Mr. Rossetti's edition was reviewed in The Times, Mr. Garnett addressed the editor of that Journal, disclaiming a motive ascribed to this very simple explanation. Mr. Garnett's letter settles the question, if it was not settled before: he says—"I proposed, or rather stated, my interpretation simply because I knew it to be right. Its correctness is shown by the circumstance that Emilia Viviani and Mrs. Shelley were accustomed to address each other as 'sisters.' Many letters from the former to the latter are preserved, in all of which Mrs. Shelley is addressed as 'Cara Sorella.'"

High, spirit-wingèd Heart! who dost for ever
 Beat thine unfeeling bars with vain endeavour,
 Till<sup>1</sup> those bright plumes of thought, in which arrayed
 It over-soared this low and worldly shade, 16
 Lie shattered; and thy panting, wounded breast
 Stains with dear blood its unmaternal nest!
 I weep vain tears: blood would less bitter be,
 Yet poured forth gladlier, could it profit thee. 20

Seraph of Heaven! too gentle to be human,
 Veiling beneath that radiant form of Woman
 All that is insupportable in thee
 Of light, and love, and immortality!
 Sweet Benediction in the eternal Curse! 25
 Veiled Glory of this lampless Universe!
 Thou Moon beyond the clouds! Thou living Form
 Among the Dead! Thou Star above the Storm!
 Thou Wonder, and thou Beauty, and thou Terror!
 Thou Harmony of Nature's art! Thou Mirror 30
 In whom, as in the splendour of the Sun,
 All shapes look glorious which thou gazest on!
 Aye,<sup>2</sup> even the dim words which obscure thee now
 Flash, lightning-like, with unaccustomed glow;
 I pray thee that thou blot from this sad song 35
 All of its much mortality and wrong,
 With those clear drops, which start like sacred dew
 From the twin lights thy sweet soul darkens through,
 Weeping, till sorrow becomes ecstasy:
 Then smile on it, so that it may not die. 40

I never thought before my death to see
 Youth's vision thus made perfect. Emily,
 I love thee; though the world by no thin name

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition, 'Till.

habitually spelt the word with a

<sup>2</sup> In Shelley's edition, Ay; but he

final e.

Will hide that love, from its unvalued shame.
 Would we two had been twins of the same mother! 45
 Or, that the name my heart lent to another
 Could be a sister's bond for her and thee,
 Blending two beams of one eternity!
 Yet were one lawful and the other true,
 These names, though dear, could paint not, as is due,
 How beyond refuge I am thine. Ah me! 51
 I am not thine: I am a part of thee.

Sweet Lamp! my moth-like Muse has burnt its wings;
 Or, like a dying swan who soars and sings,
 Young Love should teach Time, in his own grey style,
 All that thou art. Art thou not void of guile, 56
 A lovely soul formed to be blest and bless?
 A well of sealed and secret happiness,
 Whose waters like blithe light and music are,
 Vanquishing dissonance and gloom? A Star 60
 Which moves not in the moving Heavens, alone?
 A smile amid dark frowns? a gentle tone,
 Amid rude voices? a beloved light?
 A Solitude, a Refuge, a Delight?
 A Lute, which those whom love has taught to play 65
 Make music on, to soothe the roughest day
 And lull fond grief asleep? a buried treasure?
 A cradle of young thoughts of wingless pleasure?
 A violet-shrouded grave of Woe?—I measure
 The world of fancies, seeking one like thee, 70
 And find—alas! mine own infirmity.

She met me, Stranger, upon life's rough way,
 And lured me towards sweet Death; as Night by Day,
 Winter by Spring, or Sorrow by swift Hope,
 Led into light, life, peace. An antelope, 75
 In the suspended impulse of its lightness,

Were less ætherially<sup>1</sup> light; the brightness
 Of her divinest presence trembles through
 Her limbs, as underneath a cloud of dew
 Embodied in the windless Heaven of June 80
 Amid the splendour-wingèd stars, the Moon
 Burns, inextinguishably beautiful:
 And from her lips, as from a hyacinth full
 Of honey-dew, a liquid murmur drops,
 Killing the sense with passion; sweet as stops 85
 Of planetary music heard in trance.
 In her mild lights the starry spirits dance,
 The sun-beams of those wells which ever leap
 Under the lightnings of the soul—too deep
 For the brief fathom-line of thought or sense. 90
 The glory of her being, issuing thence,
 Stains the dead, blank, cold air with a warm shade
 Of unentangled intermixture, made
 By Love, of light and motion: one intense
 Diffusion, one serene Omnipresence, 95
 Whose flowing outlines mingle in their flowing
 Around her cheeks and utmost fingers glowing
 With the unintermitted blood, which there
 Quivers, (as in a fleece of snow-like air
 The crimson pulse of living morning quiver,)<sup>2</sup> 100
 Continuously prolonged, and ending never,
 Till they are lost, and in that Beauty furred
 Which penetrates and clasps and fills the world;
 Scarce visible from extreme loveliness.

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition, etherially.

<sup>2</sup> So in Shelley's and all editions up to Mr. Rossetti's, wherein the line is changed to—

The crimson pulse of living Morn may quiver, and it is suggested in a note that the words morn may "might easily be misread and misprinted as" morning. No doubt they might; yet I incline to the supposition that the line stands in the first edition as Shelley meant it to stand, and that this is a case in which he uses the subjunctive mood after a word which is not generally followed by that mood,—a case like that of when the moon. . . pause, in Laon and Cythna (Canto VII, stanza 22). Notwithstanding the "horrid violation of grammar," as Mr. Rossetti calls it, the magic of Shelley's euphony seems to me here, as in that case, to vanish with his editor's rectification. My brother, Alfred Forman, suggests that Shelley used pulse here as a plural, with a poetic instinct that, if that was not the plural, it ought to be.

Warm fragrance seems to fall from her light dress, 105
 And her loose hair; and where some heavy tress
 The air of her own speed has disentwined,
 The sweetness seems to satiate the faint wind;
 And in the soul a wild odour is felt,
 Beyond the sense, like fiery dewes that melt 110
 Into the bosom of a frozen bud.—
 See where she stands! a mortal shape indued
 With love and life and light and deity,
 And motion which may change but cannot die;
 An image of some bright Eternity; 115
 A shadow of some golden dream; a Splendour
 Leaving the third sphere pilotless; a tender
 Reflection of<sup>1</sup> the eternal Moon of Love
 Under whose motions life's dull billows move;
 A Metaphor of Spring and Youth and Morning; 120
 A Vision like incarnate April, warning,
 With smiles and tears, Frost the Anatomy
 Into his summer grave.

Ah, woe is me!

What have I dared? where am I lifted? how Shall I descend, and perish not? I know 125
 That Love makes all things equal: I have heard
 By mine own heart this joyous truth averred:
 The spirit of the worm beneath the sod
 In love and worship, blends itself with God.

Spouse! Sister! Angel! Pilot of the Fate 130
 Whose course has been so starless! O too late
 Belovèd! O too soon adored, by me!
 For in the fields of immortality
 My spirit should at first have worshipped thine,
 A divine presence in a place divine; 135

<sup>1</sup> In Mrs. Shelley's editions we read      reading of Shelley's edition, of, which on for of. Mr. Rossetti reverts to the      is of course right.

Or should have moved beside it on this earth,
 A shadow of that substance, from its birth;
 But not as now :---I love thee ; yes, I feel
 That on the fountain of my heart a seal
 Is set, to keep its waters pure and bright 140
 For thee, since in those tears thou hast delight.
 We—are we not formed, as notes of music are,<sup>1</sup>
 For one another, though dissimilar ;
 Such difference without discord, as can make
 Those sweetest sounds, in which all spirits shake 145
 As trembling leaves in a continuous air ?

Thy wisdom speaks in me, and bids me dare
 Beacon the rocks on which high hearts are wreckt.
 I never was attached to that great sect,
 Whose doctrine is, that each one should select 150
 Out of the crowd a mistress or a friend,
 And all the rest, though fair and wise, commend
 To cold oblivion, though it is in<sup>2</sup> the code
 Of modern morals, and the beaten road
 Which those poor slaves with weary footsteps tread, 155
 Who travel to their home among the dead
 By the broad highway of the world, and so
 With one chained friend, perhaps a jealous foe,
 The dreariest and the longest journey go.

<sup>1</sup> This line is so printed in all editions known to me. Mr. Rossetti says "It seems to me almost a certainty that the opening 'We' in this line ought to be cancelled." The irregularity strikes me, on the contrary, as peculiarly beautiful and characteristic.

<sup>2</sup> The word in is in Shelley's edition and in those of Mrs. Shelley and Mr. Rossetti. Professor Craik wanted it cut out (English Literature and Language, Vol II., p. 499), and cited in support of his view the fragment at page 319 of the second edition of 1839, wherein the line is printed without the word in, correctly as he says ; but its incorrectness was finally demonstrated when Mr. Garnett, having access to the same MS. books from which Mrs. Shelley got the fragment, printed the line with the word in (Relics of Shelley, p. 34). Mr. Garnett gives the words though 'tis in the code ; but whether the abbreviation of it is his or Shelley's I have been unable to ascertain. It seems to me that Professor Craik's proposal had no claim whatever to be entertained : the doctrine referred to is not the code of modern morals, but only a part of it, and therefore in the code.

True Love in this differs from gold and clay, 160
 That to divide is not to take away.
 Love is like understanding, that grows bright,
 Gazing on many truths; 'tis like thy light,
 Imagination! which from earth and sky,
 And from the depths of human phantasy, 165
 As from a thousand prisms and mirrors, fills
 The Universe with glorious beams, and kills
 Error, the worm, with many a sun-like arrow
 Of its reverberated lightning. Narrow
 The heart that loves, the brain that contemplates, 170
 The life that wears, the spirit that creates
 One object, and one form, and builds thereby
 A sepulchre for its eternity.

Mind from its object differs most in this:
 Evil from good; misery from happiness; 175
 The baser from the nobler; the impure
 And frail, from what is clear and must endure.
 If you divide suffering and dross, you may
 Diminish till it is consumed away;
 If you divide pleasure and love and thought, 180
 Each part exceeds the whole; and we know not
 How much, while any yet remains unshared,
 Of pleasure may be gained, of sorrow spared:
 This truth is that deep well, whence sages draw
 The unenvied light of hope; the eternal law 185
 By which those live, to whom this world of life
 Is as a garden ravaged, and whose strife
 Tills for the promise of a later birth
 The wilderness of this Elysian earth.

There was a Being whom my spirit oft 190
 Met on its visioned wanderings, far aloft,

In the clear golden prime of my youth's dawn,
 Upon the fairy isles of sunny lawn,
 Amid the enchanted mountains, and the caves
 Of divine sleep, and on the air-like waves 195
 Of wonder-level dream, whose tremulous floor
 Paved her light steps;—on an imagined shore,
 Under the grey beak of some promontory
 She met me, robed in such exceeding glory,
 That I beheld her not. In solitudes 200
 Her voice came to me through the whispering woods,
 And from the fountains, and the odours deep
 Of flowers, which, like lips murmuring in their sleep
 Of the sweet kisses which had lulled them there,
 Breathed but of her to the enamoured air; 205
 And from the breezes whether low or loud,
 And from the rain of every passing cloud,
 And from the singing of the summer-birds,
 And from all sounds, all silence. In the words
 Of antique verse and high romance,—in form,<sup>1</sup> 210
 Sound, colour—in whatever checks that Storm
 Which with the shattered present chokes the past;
 And in that best philosophy, whose taste
 Makes this cold common hell, our life, a doom
 As glorious as a fiery martyrdom; 215
 Her Spirit was the harmony of truth.—

Then, from the caverns of my dreamy youth
 I sprang, as one sandalled with plumes of fire,
 And towards the loadstar of my one desire,
 I flitted, like a dizzy moth, whose flight 220
 Is as a dead leaf's in the owlet light,
 When it would seek in Hesper's setting sphere
 A radiant death, a fiery sepulchre,
 As if it were a lamp of earthly flame.—

<sup>1</sup> This comma is wanting in Shelley's edition.

But She, whom prayers or tears then could not tame,
 Past, like a God throned on a wingèd planet, 226
 Whose burning plumes to tenfold swiftness fan it,
 Into the dreary cone of our life's shade;
 And as a man with mighty loss dismayed,
 I would have followed, though the grave between 230
 Yawned like a gulf whose spectres are unseen:
 When a voice said:—"O Thou of hearts the weakest,
 "The phantom is beside thee whom thou seekest."
 Then I—"where?" the world's echo answered "where!"
 And in that silence, and in my despair, 235
 I questioned every tongueless wind that flew
 Over my tower of mourning, if it knew
 Whither 'twas fled, this soul out of my soul;
 And murmured names and spells which have controul
 Over the sightless tyrants of our fate; 240
 But neither prayer nor verse could dissipate
 The night which closed on her; nor uncreate
 That world within this Chaos, mine and me,
 Of which she was the veiled Divinity,
 The world I say of thoughts that worshipped her: 245
 And therefore I went forth, with hope and fear
 And every gentle passion sick to death,
 Feeding my course with expectation's breath,
 Into the wintry forest of our life;
 And struggling through its error with vain strife, 250
 And stumbling in my weakness and my haste,
 And half bewildered by new forms, I past
 Seeking among those untaught foresters
 If I could find one form resembling hers,
 In which she might have masked herself from me. 255
 There,—One, whose voice was venomèd melody
 Sate by a well, under blue night-shade bowers;
 The breath of her false mouth was like faint flowers,
 Her touch was as electric poison,—flame

Out of her looks into my vitals came, 260
 And from her living cheeks and bosom flew
 A killing air, which pierced like honey-dew
 Into the core of my green heart, and lay
 Upon its leaves ; until, as hair grown grey
 O'er a young brow, they hid its unblown prime 265
 With ruins of unseasonable time.

In many mortal forms I rashly sought
 The shadow of that idol of my thought.
 And some were fair—but beauty dies away :
 Others were wise—but honeyed words betray : 270
 And One was true—oh ! why not true to me ?
 Then, as a hunted deer that could not flee,
 I turned upon my thoughts, and stood at bay,
 Wounded and weak and panting ; the cold day
 Trembled, for pity of my strife and pain. 275
 When, like a noon-day dawn, there shone again
 Deliverance. One stood on my path who seemed
 As like the glorious shape which I had dreamed,
 As is the Moon, whose changes ever run
 Into themselves, to the eternal Sun ; 280
 The cold chaste Moon, the Queen of Heaven's bright isles,
 Who makes all beautiful on which she smiles,<sup>1</sup>
 That wandering shrine of soft yet icy flame
 Which ever is transformed, yet still the same,
 And warms not but illumines. Young and fair 285
 As the descended Spirit of that sphere,
 She hid me, as the Moon may hide the night
 From its own darkness, until all was bright
 Between the Heaven and Earth of my calm mind,
 And, as a cloud charioted by the wind, 290
 She led me to a cave in that wild place,

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition this line ends with a full-stop, doubtless a misprint.

And sate beside me, with her downward face
 Illumining my slumbers, like the Moon
 Waxing and waning o'er Endymion.
 And I was laid asleep, spirit and limb, 295
 And all my being became bright or dim
 As the Moon's image in a summer sea,
 According as she smiled or frowned on me ;
 And there I lay, within a chaste cold bed :
 Alas, I then was nor alive nor dead :— 300
 For at her silver voice came Death and Life,
 Unmindful each of their accustomed strife,
 Masked like twin babes, a sister and a brother,
 The wandering hopes of one abandoned mother,
 And through the cavern without wings they flew, 305
 And cried "Away, he is not of our crew."
 I wept, and though it be a dream, I weep.

What storms then shook the ocean of my sleep,
 Blotting that Moon, whose pale and waning lips
 Then shrank as in the sickness of eclipse ;— 310
 And how my soul was as a lampless sea,
 And who was then its Tempest ; and when She,
 The Planet of that hour, was quenched, what frost
 Crept o'er those waters, till<sup>1</sup> from coast to coast
 The moving billows of my being fell 315
 Into a death of ice, immovable<sup>2</sup> ;—
 And then—what earthquakes made it gape and split,
 The white Moon smiling all the while on it,
 These words conceal :—If not, each word would be
 The key of staunchless tears. Weep not for me ! 320

At length, into the obscure Forest came
 The Vision I had sought through grief and shame.
 Athwart that wintry wilderness of thorns

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition, 'till.

<sup>2</sup> In Shelley's edition, immoveable.

Flashed from her motion splendour like the Morn's,
 And from her presence life was radiated 825
 Through the grey earth and branches bare and dead ;
 So that her way was paved, and roofed above
 With flowers as soft as thoughts of budding love ;
 And music from her respiration spread
 Like light,—all other sounds were penetrated 830
 By the small, still, sweet spirit of that sound,
 So that the savage winds hung mute around ;
 And odours warm and fresh fell from her hair
 Dissolving the dull cold in the froze<sup>1</sup> air :
 Soft as an Incarnation of the Sun, 835
 When light is changed to love, this glorious One
 Floated into the cavern where I lay,
 And called my Spirit, and the dreaming clay
 Was lifted by the thing that dreamed below
 As smoke by fire, and in her beauty's glow 840
 I stood, and felt the dawn of my long night
 Was penetrating me with living light :
 I knew it was the Vision veiled from me
 So many years—that it was Emily.

Twin<sup>2</sup> Spheres of light who rule this passive Earth,
 This world of love, this me ; and into birth 845
 Awaken all its fruits and flowers, and dart
 Magnetic might into its central heart ;
 And lift its billows and its mists, and guide
 By everlasting laws, each wind and tide 850
 To its fit cloud, and its appointed cave ;
 And lull its storms, each in the craggy grave
 Which was its cradle, luring to faint bowers
 The armies of the rain-bow-wingèd showers ; 854

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's and Mrs. Shelley's editions we read froze : but this is an obvious printer's blunder.

<sup>2</sup> So in Shelley's edition ; but Thin in Mrs. Shelley's.

And, as those married lights, which from the towers
 Of Heaven look forth and fold the wandering globe
 In liquid sleep and splendour, as a robe;
 And all their many-mingled influence blend,
 If equal, yet unlike, to one sweet end;—
 So ye, bright regents, with alternate sway 260
 Govern my sphere of being, night and day!
 Thou, not disdaining even a borrowed might;
 Thou, not eclipsing a remoter light;
 And, through the shadow of the seasons three,
 From Spring to Autumn's sere maturity, 265
 Light it into the Winter of the tomb,
 Where it may ripen to a brighter bloom.
 Thou too, O Comet beautiful and fierce,
 Who drew the heart of this frail Universe
 Towards thine own; till, wreckt in that convulsion, 270
 Alternating attraction and repulsion,
 Thine went astray and that was rent in twain;
 Oh, float into our azure heaven again!
 Be there love's folding-star at thy return;
 The living Sun will feed thee from its urn 275
 Of golden fire; the Moon will veil her horn
 In thy last smiles; adoring Even and Morn
 Will worship thee with incense of calm breath
 And lights and shadows; as the star of Death
 And Birth is worshipped by those sisters wild 280
 Called Hope and Fear—upon the heart are piled
 Their offerings,—of this sacrifice divine
 A World shall be the altar.

Lady mine,

Scorn not these flowers of thought, the fading birth
 Which from its heart of hearts that plant puts forth
 Whose fruit, made perfect by thy sunny eyes, 285
 Will be as of the trees of Paradise.

The day is come, and thou wilt fly with me.
 To whatsoe'er of dull mortality
 Is mine, remain a vestal sister still ; 390
 To the intense, the deep, the imperishable,
 Not mine but me, henceforth be thou united
 Even as a bride, delighting and delighted.
 The hour is come :---the destined Star has risen
 Which shall descend upon a vacant prison. 395
 The walls are high, the gates are strong, thick set
 The sentinels---but true love never yet
 Was thus constrained : it overleaps all fence :
 Like lightning, with invisible violence
 Piercing its continents ; like Heaven's free breath, 400
 Which he who grasps can hold not ; liker Death,
 Who rides upon a thought, and makes his way
 Through temple, tower, and palace, and the array
 Of arms : more strength has Love than he or they ;
 For it<sup>1</sup> can burst his charnel, and make free 405
 The limbs in chains, the heart in agony,
 The soul in dust and chaos.

Emily,

A ship is floating in the harbour now,
 A wind is hovering o'er the mountain's brow ;
 There is a path on the sea's azure floor, 410
 No keel has ever ploughed that path before ;
 The halcyons brood around the foamless isles ;
 The treacherous Ocean has forsworn its wiles ;
 The merry mariners are bold and free :
 Say, my heart's sister, wilt thou sail with me ? 415
 Our bark is as an albatross, whose nest

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition, *it : in Mrs. Shelley's, he. Mr. Rossetti follows this latter reading, and makes a further change by printing his in Italics. I think it is clearly right ; for Love is called it at the opening of the passage (line 398) ; and the sense intended seems to me to be that Love can burst Death's charnel, not its own charnel as Mr. Rossetti renders it.

Is a far Eden of the purple East;
 And we between her wings will sit, while Night
 And Day, and Storm, and Calm, pursue their flight,
 Our ministers, along the boundless Sea, 420
 Treading each other's heels, unheededly.
 It is an isle under Ionian skies,
 Beautiful as a wreck of Paradise,
 And, for the harbours are not safe and good,
 This land would have remained a solitude 425
 But for some pastoral people native there,
 Who from the Elysian, clear, and golden air
 Draw the last spirit of the age of gold,
 Simple and spirited; innocent and bold.
 The blue Ægean girds<sup>1</sup> this chosen home, 430
 With ever-changing sound and light and foam,
 Kissing the sifted sands, and caverns hoar;
 And all the winds wandering along the shore
 Undulate with the undulating tide:
 There are thick woods where sylvan forms abide; 435
 And many a fountain, rivulet, and pond,
 As clear as elemental diamond,
 Or serene morning air; and far beyond,
 The mossy tracks made by the goats and deer
 (Which the rough shepherd treads but once a year,) 440
 Pierce into glades, caverns, and bowers, and halls
 Built round with ivy, which the waterfalls
 Illumining, with sound that never fails
 Accompany the noon-day nightingales;
 And all the place is peopled with sweet airs; 445
 The light clear element which the isle wears
 Is heavy with the scent of lemon-flowers,
 Which floats like mist laden with unseen showers,

<sup>1</sup> In Mrs. Shelley's first edition of 1839, girls was printed for girds; but girds was restored in the second edition of the same year.

And falls upon the eye-lids like faint sleep;
 And from the moss violets and jonquils peep, 450
 And dart their arrowy odour through the brain
 'Till you might faint with that delicious pain.
 And every motion, odour, beam and tone,
 With that deep music is in unison:
 Which is a soul within the soul---they seem 455
 Like echoes of an antenatal dream.—
 It is an isle 'twixt Heaven, Air, Earth, and Sea,
 Cradled, and hung in clear tranquillity;
 Bright as that wandering Eden Lucifer,
 Washed by the soft blue Oceans of young air. 460
 It is a favoured place. Famine or Blight,
 Pestilence, War, and Earthquake, never light
 Upon its mountain-peaks; blind vultures, they
 Sail onward far upon their fatal way:
 The wingèd storms, chaunting their thunder-psalm 465
 To other lands, leave azure chasms of calm
 Over this isle, or weep themselves in dew,
 From which its fields and woods ever renew
 Their green and golden immortality.
 And from the sea there rise, and from the sky 470
 There fall, clear exhalations, soft and bright,
 Veil after veil, each hiding some delight,
 Which Sun or Moon or zephyr draw aside,
 Till the isle's beauty, like a naked bride
 Glowing at once with love and loveliness, 475
 Blushes and trembles at its own excess:
 Yet, like a buried lamp, a Soul no less
 Burns in the heart of this delicious isle,
 An atom of th' Eternal, whose own smile
 Unfolds itself, and may be felt,<sup>1</sup> not seen 480
 O'er the grey rocks, blue waves, and forests green,
 Filling their bare and void interstices.—

<sup>1</sup> This comma is wanting in Shelley's edition.

But the chief marvel of the wilderness
 Is a lone dwelling, built by whom or how
 None of the rustic island-people know : 485
 'Tis not a tower of strength, though with its height
 It overtops the woods ; but, for delight,
 Some wise and tender Ocean-King, ere crime
 Had been invented, in the world's young prime,
 Reared it, a wonder of that simple time, 490
 An envy of the isles, a pleasure-house
 Made sacred to his sister and his spouse.
 It scarce seems now a wreck of human art,
 But, as it were Titanic ; in the heart
 Of Earth having assumed its form, then grown 495
 Out of the mountains, from the living stone,
 Lifting itself in caverns light and high :
 For all the antique and learned imagery
 Has been erased, and in the place of it
 The ivy and the wild-vine interknit 500
 The volumes of their many twining<sup>1</sup> stems ;
 Parasite flowers illumine with dewy gems
 The lampless halls, and when they fade, the sky
 Peeps through their winter-woof<sup>2</sup> of tracery
 With Moon-light patches, or star atoms keen, 505
 Or fragments of the day's intense serene ;—
 Working mosaic on their Parian floors.
 And, day and night, aloof, from the high towers
 And terraces, the Earth and Ocean seem
 To sleep in one another's arms, and dream 510

<sup>1</sup> These are two words in Shelley's edition ; but in Mrs. Shelley's first edition of 1839 we read many-twining, as also in Mr. Rossetti's. It is a likely enough compound word for Shelley to use ; but the original reading is so perfectly safe and sound, that there can be but little excuse for, or safety in, emendation.

<sup>2</sup> Mr. Rossetti "cannot help suspecting that Shelley wrote 'inter-woof.'" I am satisfied that winter-woof is right,—having reference to the distinction between the tracery of bare stems seen against the sky in winter and the massing of the foliage in flower-time.

Of waves, flowers, clouds, woods, rocks, and all that we
Read in their smiles, and call reality.

This isle and house are mine, and I have vowed
Thee to be lady of the solitude.---
And I have fitted up some chambers there 515
Looking towards the golden Eastern air,
And level with the living winds, which flow
Like waves above the living waves below.---
I have sent books and music there, and all
Those instruments with which high spirits call 520
The future from its cradle, and the past
Out of its grave, and make the present last
In thoughts and joys which sleep, but cannot die,
Folded within their own eternity.
Our simple life wants little, and true taste 525
Hires not the pale drudge Luxury, to waste
The scene it would adorn, and therefore still,
Nature with all her children, haunts the hill.
The ring-dove, in the embowering ivy, yet
Keeps up her love-lament, and the owls flit 530
Round the evening tower, and the young stars glance
Between the quick bats in their twilight dance;
The spotted deer bask in the fresh moon-light
Before our gate, and the slow, silent night
Is measured by the pants of their calm sleep. 535
Be this our home in life, and when years heap
Their withered hours, like leaves, on our decay,
Let us become the over-hanging day,
The living soul of this Elysian isle,
Conscious, inseparable, one. Meanwhile 540
We two will rise, and sit, and walk together,
Under the roof of blue Ionian weather,
And wander in the meadows, or ascend

The mossy mountains, where the blue heavens bend
 With lightest winds, to touch their paramour; 545
 Or linger, where the pebble-paven shore,
 Under the quick, faint kisses of the sea
 Trembles and sparkles as with ecstasy,<sup>1</sup>---
 Possessing and possest by all that is
 Within that calm circumference of bliss, 550
 And by each other, till to love and live
 Be one :---or, at the noontide hour, arrive
 Where some old cavern hoar seems yet to keep
 The moonlight of the expired night asleep,
 Through which the awakened day can never peep; 555
 A veil for our seclusion, close as Night's,
 Where secure sleep may kill thine innocent lights;
 Sleep, the fresh dew of languid love, the rain
 Whose drops quench kisses till they burn again.
 And we will talk, until thought's melody 560
 Become too sweet for utterance, and it die
 In words, to live again in looks, which dart
 With thrilling tone into the voiceless heart,
 Harmonizing silence without a sound.
 Our breath shall intermix, our bosoms bound, 565
 And our veins beat together; and our lips
 With other eloquence than words, eclipse
 The soul that burns between them, and the wells
 Which boil under our being's inmost cells,
 The fountains of our deepest life, shall be 570
 Confused in passion's golden purity,
 As mountain-springs under the morning Sun.
 We shall become the same, we shall be one
 Spirit within two frames, oh! wherefore two?
 One passion in twin-hearts, which grows and grew, 575

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition, ecstasy, though the word is correctly spelt in line 39, p. 8.

Till<sup>1</sup> like two meteors of expanding flame,
 Those spheres instinct with it become the same,
 Touch, mingle, are transfigured; ever still
 Burning, yet ever inconsumable:

In one another's substance finding food,
 Like flames too pure and light and unimbued
 To nourish their bright lives with baser prey,
 Which point to Heaven and cannot pass away:
 One hope within two wills, one will beneath
 Two overshadowing minds, one life, one death,
 One Heaven, one Hell, one immortality,
 And one annihilation. Woe is me!

The winged words on which my soul would pierce
 Into the height of love's rare Universe,
 Are chains of lead around its flight of fire.---
 I pant, I sink, I tremble, I expire!

580

590

Weak Verses, go, kneel at your Sovereign's feet,
 And say:—"We are the masters of thy slave;
 "What wouldest thou with us and ours and thine?"
 Then call your sisters from Oblivion's cave,
 All singing loud: "Love's very pain is sweet,
 "But its reward is in the world divine
 "Which, if not here, it builds beyond the grave."
 So shall ye live when I am there. Then haste
 Over the hearts of men, until ye meet
 Marina, Vanna, Primus,<sup>2</sup> and the rest,
 And bid them love each other and be blest:
 And leave the troop which errs, and which reproves,
 And come and be my guest, --- for I am Love's.

596

600

<sup>1</sup> In Shelley's edition, 'Till.

<sup>2</sup> Marina is a pet-name of Mrs. Shelley's: Vanna is the diminutive of Giovanna (Joan or Jane), and might, as Mr. Rossetti hints, refer to Mrs.

Williams, to whom Shelley had been introduced shortly before sending off Epipsychidion to Mr. Ollier. I have seen no explanation offered as to Primus, and know of none.

